Australian shoppers’ preferences are evolving, creating a landscape full of opportunities for brands and retailers. While social media continues to play a role, the path to purchase in Australia includes some surprising trends.

One critical insight is the resurgence of brick-and-mortar stores. Over half of respondents prioritize physical stores for their shopping needs. However, there’s a growing demand for a smooth omnichannel shopping experience, with nearly half of consumers wanting brands to integrate their online and offline offerings seamlessly.

According to the Bazaarvoice Shopper Preference Report, based on a survey of over 1,021 Australians, with at least 48% in the 18-44 age group, user-generated video reviews are becoming increasingly influential. This shift highlights the importance of authenticity and real-world testimonials.

Additionally, there’s a rising acceptance of private-label brands. Australian shoppers increasingly find these alternatives to national brands satisfactory in terms of quality and value.

Let us dive deep!
Preference for physical stores

With over three-quarters of Australian consumers returning to the office — the highest rate among their global counterparts — they increasingly spend more on in-store shopping.

Since returning to work, a significant portion of Australian consumers have maintained their preference for offline shopping.

Recap

Australian consumers strongly prefer brands that seamlessly blend their online and offline shopping experiences, underscoring the critical need for a unified omnichannel strategy. Yet, to foster lasting loyalty, brands must connect with consumers through their preferred channels and tailor engagement strategies accordingly, ensuring a personalized and cohesive loyalty experience.

VIDEOS ARE KEY TO REACHING CONSUMERS:
From user-generated content to brand videos and tutorials, Australian shoppers enjoy watching videos and are more likely to purchase products they see advertised on social media. Leveraging video content effectively can significantly boost engagement and sales.

EMAIL COMMUNICATION FOR BRAND LOYALTY:
While loyalty programs are important, Australian shoppers prefer email communication to maintain their connection with a brand. Effective email campaigns are crucial for nurturing and retaining loyal customers.

MAINTAIN A STRONG PHYSICAL PRESENCE:
Despite the digital shift, Australian shoppers still prioritize physical stores for their shopping needs. Brands must ensure a robust physical presence to complement their online efforts, creating a seamless and comprehensive shopping experience.
